GUESTS' BIOS

Hartmut Lutz,

Prof. Dr. phil. habil., teaches North American Literatures and Cultures at the U of Szczecin. Until March 2011 he held the chair for American and Canadian Studies: North American Anglo-phone Literatures and Cultures at the U of Greifswald, Germany. He gained his doctorate from the U of Tübingen in 1973 for William Goldings Prosawerk, a psychoanalytical approach to William Golding's novels, and he received his habilitation from the U of Osnabrück in 1983 for "Indianer" und "Native Americans", a study of Indian stereotyping in U.S. and German history and culture. Book publications include Achte Deines Bruders Traum! (1987, republ. 1997), Minority Literatures in North America (with Wolfgang Karrer, 1989); Contemporary Challenges (Saskatoon, 1991), Approaches: Essays in Native North American Cultures and Literatures (2002), Connections (with Coomi Vevaina, Delhi 2002), The Diary of Abraham Ulrikab (Ottawa, 2005), Howard Adams Otapaway (Saskatoon, 2005), Canada in Grainau (with Klaus Ertler, 2009), and Heute sind wir hier/We Are Here Today, a bilingual collection of contemporary Aboriginal literature from Canada (together with Greifswald students, 2009).

He is the founding editor of the OBEMA-series, which published twice a year bilingual editions of works by Minority authors (1989-1998). Hartmut Lutz taught at the universities of Cologne, Osnabrück and Greifswald, as well as at Native Studies programs in the U.S. and Canada, including Dartmouth College, N.H., and the Saskatchewan Indian Federated College, Regina. He has served as guest professor at universities in Canada, Denmark, Finland, Iceland, Poland, Romania, Spain, and the US. Among his awards are Fulbright, DAAD- and ICCS-fellowships as well as the Harris Chair (Dartmouth College), the Canadian Government's 2003 John G. Diefenbaker Award (Ottawa U), and a 2012 Killam Visiting Fellowship Award (U of Calgary).

Eva C. Karpinski teaches feminist theory, cultural studies, autobiography, and translation studies in the School of Gender, Sexuality and Women's Studies at York University in Toronto. Her research interests include postmodernist and poststructuralist theories of subjectivity, identity, and the body, feminist ethics and pedagogy, twentieth-century American literature, and women's writing. She has written on such topics as micro-cosmopolitanism, multiculturalism, transnationalism, trauma and witnessing, fictional analysis, queer autoethnography, dystopian romance, and critical masculinities. Her articles on Dionne Brand, Daphne Marlatt, Nicole Brossard, Joy Kogawa, Deepa Mehta, Suniti Namjoshi, Mary Melfi, Eva Hoffman, Angela Carter, and George Orwell have appeared in Open Letter, RIAS, Literature Compass, Men and Masculinities, Studies in Canadian Literature, Canadian Woman Studies, Resources for Feminist Research, Canadian Ethnic Studies, and Utopian Studies, among others. She is also editor of Pens of Many Colours: A Canadian Reader, a popular college anthology of multicultural writing.

Her book on Canadian and American immigrant women's narratives, called Borrowed Tongues: Life Writing, Migration, and Translation, is coming out in May 2012, from Wilfrid Laurier University Press.

CANADIAN STUDIES STUDENT CIRCLE

Established in 2009, we are the only student circle in Poland entirely dedicated to the study of Canadian culture. Although we are enthusiastic about all things Canadian, including literature, music, and history, our interests lie in particular in the studies of Canadian multiculturalism and Indigenous and diasporic forms of artistic expression. At our biweekly meetings we explore First Nations literature and theatre with a special focus on Indigenous knowledge and epistemologies and their relation to the Canadian mainstream culture.

Our forays into Canadian culture have resulted in two research trips to British Columbia, the first in 2010, and the most recent in March 2012 (see our blog for details: <http://watchingcanada.blogspot.com>). Two groups of students visited Vancouver and Vancouver Island, researching Northwest Coast First Nations communities and attending classes at the University of British Columbia and Vancouver Island University. The students met with and interviewed First Nations Elders, totem carvers, and playwrights, and in exchange gave multimedia presentations on the topic of Silesian culture and identity, developing thus a cross-cultural dialogue between Poland and Canada.

Our student circle helps organize a number of Canada-related events. The most prominent is the annual Day of Canadian Culture, held in May, which consists of a series of lectures, discussions, workshops and film screenings on the subject of all aspects of Canadian cultural and artistic activity. Every year we invite professors and experts in the field of Canadian studies to share their knowledge and help promote Canadian culture amongst Polish students. In 2010 we organized a student conference in Szczyrk ("Exploring Transected Transculturalism: At the Borderlands of Ethnicity/Race, Gender and Identity"). There are plans for more activities of this type.

We heartily invite all interested students to join us and share our love of Canada! Contact us at csscus@gmail.com or find us on FB to get involved!

The project is undertaken with an assistance of the Department of Foreign Affairs Canada, Canadian Embassy in Warsaw, Polish Association for Canadian Studies and the University of Silesia.
